The Blue Bar

SCHMELZHOF
LECH

En hommage à BB.

Welcome to the Blue Bar!

Good bars tell stories. Like Harrys Bar in Venice, where Giuseppe Cipriani invented the carpaccio for a dyspeptic countess. Or the bar at Hotel Ritz in Paris, where Hemingway is said to have complained about his wife Mary telling him to drink less. The barkeeper then mixed him a drink made up of vodka and tomato juice. Hemingway's reaction: "Bloody Mary never smelt a thing".

Good hotel bars are places where exciting encounters happen. An aspiration the Blaue Bar (blue bar) at boutique hotel Schmelzhof shares. Guests here are only served the best drinks. It is also a place where stories are told while the barmaid and barman cut paper-thin slices of San Daniele ham on a Berkel from 1933 to serve to their guests.

A very special bar snack

Prosciutto San Daniele
plate 16.80
... thinly sliced using our original
Berkel slicing machine from 1933.

In the 1890s, Wilhelmus Adrianus van Berkel, a master butcher from Rotterdam, invented a hand-operated machine for slicing ham, sausages and meat more precisely and quickly than ever before. The Berkel patent is for a hand-operated wheel that moves a sliding table parallel to sharp, convex, rotating blades. The Berkel is the Ferrari of slicing machines. Our Berkel was made in London in 1933. And you can tell: Prosciutto San Daniele sliced using a Berkel is a cut above.

Opportunities to ski at Arlberg are varied. This fun-loving ski party have stopped on a lane hewn through deep walls of snow to pass their skis up to Hans and embrace a glorious day of skiing in the spring sunshine.
